Summary:

Gelli Mor is a family run care home near Milford Haven in Pembrokeshire. It offers residential/respite care and supported living for young adults.

Well-being is good. The service promotes a strong, person-centred culture where individuals are well known by staff and supported to maintain their identity, relationships and independence. People appear relaxed, safe and emotionally secure, benefiting from kind, respectful interactions and meaningful engagement. Opportunities for activities and community involvement support inclusion and reduce isolation, while people's views are actively sought and used to shape the service.

Care and support are good with people receiving responsive and effective care from staff who understand their needs well. Care planning is detailed and supports safe, consistent delivery. There are robust systems in place for safeguarding, medication management and infection prevention and control, alongside effective partnership working with external professionals to support people's health needs.

The environment is good. It is safe, clean and homely, with well-maintained communal and outdoor spaces that promote both social interaction and independence.

Leadership and management are good. The service benefits from visible and approachable leadership, a positive staff culture, and effective governance systems that support continuous improvement and good outcomes for people.

Findings:

Well-being — Good

People live healthily and safely with control over their lives. People appeared relaxed and content throughout the inspection. People told us, "It's great, I like it". We observed care staff interacting in a calm, sensitive and reassuring way, adapting their approach when individuals were confused or unsettled. Care staff consistently used kind and respectful language, promoting dignity and emotional well-being through positive, person-centred engagement. People were observed to seek reassurance and social interaction from care staff, reflecting positive and trusting relationships. This contributes to a stable and emotionally supportive environment.

People's health and well-being needs are met. We examined records confirming regular involvement of health professionals and care staff demonstrate a clear understanding of people's needs. People are protected from harm. Care staff have received training in safeguarding vulnerable people and are aware of their safeguarding duties. Risks are understood and managed appropriately, enabling people to be supported safely while maintaining as much independence as possible.

People are safe and protected from abuse and neglect and are treated with dignity and respect. Throughout the inspection, we observed warm, natural interactions between care staff and people, with care staff demonstrating a good understanding of people's preferences and needs.

People are supported to cultivate safe and healthy relationships through open visiting arrangements and continued links with the wider community. The service has developed positive community connections, and families told us, "Its excellent, it really is. There are very few places that can support [relative], very professional." This inclusive approach strengthens relationships and helps people remain connected to those important to them.

People and their families are included in improving service delivery through regular meetings facilitated by the service. We heard how the service uses proactive approaches to engage with people, enabling them to share their views and experiences in a meaningful and creative way. This ensures feedback is gathered at a pace suitable for individuals and is not rushed, supporting inclusive and person-centred involvement.

People live in accommodation that supports their well-being outcomes. People were able to choose when to get up, chose their own meal options and could decide whether to take part in activities. There are suitable opportunities for engagement, with a varied programme that reflects people's interests. Personalised initiatives, support meaningful occupation and enhance well-being. Care staff also demonstrated awareness of individuals who may be less likely to engage in group activities and supported them through one-to-one interaction, ensuring they remain included.

Some care staff speak Welsh, however this is limited therefore there is restricted provision of the Welsh language. Although some staff have basic Welsh, further development is needed to fully support the active offer.

Care & Support — Good

People receive the quality of care and support they need to achieve their personal outcomes. Care staff understand people well and use this knowledge to deliver care in a dignified, respectful and responsive manner. We observed staff responding promptly to people's needs, providing reassurance and appropriate support. Families told us that staff go out of their way to engage positively with people, supporting meaningful interactions and ensuring their needs are met. One representative told us*,"All the carers are exceptionally warm and nice."*

People's medication is safely managed. Medication management systems are safe and well organised. There are clear processes for the ordering, storage, administration and disposal of medicines, with controlled drugs managed in line with legal requirements. These arrangements help make sure people receive their medicines safely and as prescribed.

People's risk of cross infection is minimised. An infection prevention and control policy underpins staff practice. Personal protective equipment (PPE) is readily available and used appropriately. The care staff conduct cleaning schedules and the home is free from malodour. The laundry systems are well organised.

Environment

Good

People live in a safe, welcoming and homely environment that meets their needs and supports their wellbeing. Bedrooms are appropriately sized, personalised to reflect people's preferences and can accommodate people's personal effects. We saw that the décor, furnishings and other items in people's bedrooms reflect their personality and interests with items important to individuals on display, supporting a sense of identity and belonging.

Communal areas are well designed and provide opportunities for both social interaction and private space. Lounge and dining areas are bright, airy and comfortable. The environment has a homely feel and does not appear clinical or institutional, which supports people to feel relaxed and at ease in their surroundings. Bathrooms and toilets all have been recently decorated.

People can safely access the outdoor space. The home benefits from natural light and scenic views, contributing positively to people's well-being. The garden is secure, well maintained and suitable for use. It provides opportunities for engagement and meaningful activities that support people's well-being.

Good standards of cleanliness and hygiene are maintained throughout the home. Bathrooms, bedrooms, laundry and kitchen areas are clean, organised and well maintained. The service takes a proactive approach to maintaining the environment. Repairs are completed promptly, and there is an ongoing programme of refurbishment.

Arrangements are in place to keep people safe within the environment. Health and safety systems are well managed, with routine checks and monitoring supporting ongoing improvement. Environmental checks, servicing and repairs are completed in line with agreed schedules, and external contractors carry out specialist work where required. Fire safety systems are robust. Regular checks take place and care staff receive appropriate training to ensure people can be supported safely in the event of a fire.

Infection prevention and control is managed effectively, with a good supply of PPE available. Secure access arrangements, including controlled entry and visitor sign-in procedures, help protect people and promote their safety. There are Personal emergency evacuation plans (PEEPs) in place for people and an evacuation drill undertaken recently.

Leadership & Management — Good

People are supported to achieve their outcomes because the service provider has effective organisational arrangements, governance and oversight to ensure smooth operations and high-quality care. The service benefits from effective leadership and management, with well-established governance arrangements that support the delivery of safe, high-quality care. The interim manager is visible within the service and promotes a positive and open culture. They demonstrate a reflective approach, which supports ongoing improvement and helps ensure good outcomes for people living at the service.

Feedback from care staff, families and professionals was positive. They consistently described the manager as "approachable" and told us they "feel confident" in their leadership.

People are supported by care staff with the necessary expertise, skills and qualifications to meet people's care and support needs. The provider follows safe recruitment and induction processes. Care staff are appropriately vetted and receive structured support when they begin their roles. Training is comprehensive and compliance levels are good. Care staff told us training prepares them well to carry out their responsibilities. Care staff maintain the required professional registrations with Social Care Wales which supports safe and competent practice. Supervision and appraisal processes are in place and are used to support development and address any practice issues in a timely way.

Governance arrangements are effective and support the oversight of the service. The provider completes regular audits and quality assurance processes to monitor performance and identify areas for improvement. There is good communication across the service, which supports a clear understanding of performance and ensures any issues are addressed. This supports a planned and proactive approach to the running of the service.

The Responsible Individual (RI) undertakes regular visits to the service and completes reports to support oversight. The RI also completes six-monthly quality of care reviews, which help ensure standards are maintained and that people's views inform service development.

The service has clear policies and procedures in place, which provide care staff with appropriate guidance. Complaints processes are established, and people and their families know how to raise concerns or provide feedback. Families told us communication with the management team is good and that they feel well informed. These arrangements support an open culture and promote people's safety, wellbeing and confidence in the service.

Areas identified for improvement

Where we identify Areas for Improvement but we have not found outcomes for people to be at immediate or significant risk, we discuss these with the provider. We expect the provider to take action and we will follow this up at the next inspection.

Where we find outcomes for people require significant improvement and/or there is risk to people's well-being we identify areas for Priority Action. In these circumstances we issue a Priority Action Notice(s) to the Provider, and they must take immediate steps to make improvements. We will inspect again within six months to check improvements have been made and outcomes for people have improved.

CIW has no areas for improvement identified following this inspection.

CIW has not issued any Priority action notices following this inspection.
