Summary:

People at Beatrice Webb experience good wellbeing through positive, respectful relationships with caring staff, meaningful activities, and strong community connections. People value the garden and social opportunities that reduce isolation. However, care planning needs improvement to better identify, monitor, and review individual wellbeing outcomes, aspirations, and personal goals.

Care and support at the service requires improvement. Although staff work effectively with health and social care professionals, personal plans are outdated, inconsistent risk assessment reviews, training compliance, record quality, consultation processes, and medication management. These issues reduce assurance that care remains person-centred, safe, responsive, and consistently monitored.

The environment is good, whereby people enjoy a clean, welcoming, and accessible environment that supports people's wellbeing. People enjoy personalised living spaces, comfortable communal areas, and a valued garden that promotes social engagement. While environmental improvements are evident, stronger governance is needed to ensure consistent health and safety monitoring, fire safety oversight, and completion of maintenance actions.

Leadership and management at the service requires significant improvement. Inspection findings identified widespread governance and oversight failures affecting care planning, staff supervision, training, health and safety, recruitment, and quality assurance. Although the interim manager has begun addressing concerns, ineffective monitoring systems have not ensured sustained improvements, regulatory compliance, accountability, or safe, high-quality care.

Findings:

Well-being — Good

Wellbeing at Beatrice Webb is good, where people enjoy positive relationships with staff who treat them with dignity and respect. Throughout the inspection, we observed warm, patient and respectful interactions. Staff communicate in a calm and encouraging manner, offering reassurance when supporting people with meals and respond promptly to requests for assistance. People told us they are happy living at the service and express satisfaction with the support they receive. Relatives and visitors consistently describe staff as welcoming, approachable and caring. They told us staff support people and treat them with kindness.

People can access a range of opportunities that support their social wellbeing and reduce the risk of isolation. Staff provide a varied programme of activities including visits from entertainers, choirs, creative sessions, gardening projects and community outings. We saw people taking part in activities linked to local culture and seasonal events. Staff use newsletters, family communication groups and photographic updates to help people maintain connections with relatives and the wider community.

People spoke positively about the garden environment and described it as a meaningful space that promotes wellbeing, reflection and social interaction. Relatives describe the gardens as a "Garden of solace". People regularly use the outdoor spaces to relax, take part in gardening activities and engage in community projects.

While people experience many positive aspects of daily life, the service does not consistently identify, record and review individual wellbeing outcomes. Personal plans focus primarily on care tasks and assessed needs rather than the outcomes people want to achieve and how staff will support them to achieve their goals. We found limited evidence that staff routinely monitor progress against wellbeing outcomes or review people's aspirations.

Overall, people benefit from positive relationships with staff, meaningful activities and a welcoming environment. However, the service must strengthen care planning and consultation arrangements to ensure staff consistently identify, review and use people's wellbeing outcomes, wishes and aspirations to shape the support they receive.

Care & Support — Requires Improvement

Care and support at the service requires improvement. The service works with a range of health and social care professionals to support people's health needs. Records reviewed contained information relating to referrals and involvement from external professionals, including social workers, advocacy services and healthcare professionals.

During inspection concerns were identified regarding the quality and accuracy of personal planning documentation. Personal plans are not consistently reviewed within required timescales and several records contained inaccurate or outdated information. Personal plans had not been updated to reflect changes in needs and preferences. Staff are therefore relying on inaccurate or outdated information.

There is a safeguarding policy at the service and safeguarding training available to staff. However, not all staff are up to date with the safeguarding training. In addition, there is a risk to people as there was limited evidence to support that peoples risk assessments were consistently reviewed and updated. Effective risk management relies on accurate and current information, and the records reviewed did not consistently provide this assurance of this.

Daily records lacked detail and are often task-focused rather than outcome-focused. Entries frequently record that care had been provided but did not explain how support related to assessed needs, wellbeing outcomes or changes in presentation. Records did not consistently demonstrate that care planning remained responsive to changing needs.

People's voices are not always reflected consistently through formal systems. Although recent resident meetings had taken place and positive examples of consultation were identified regarding menu choices and dining experiences. There was limited evidence that meetings had been held regularly before this period. We found insufficient evidence to demonstrate how people's views, wishes and experiences are routinely gathered, recorded and used to influence service delivery. This reduces assurance that people consistently have opportunities to shape decisions that affect their daily lives.
Medication administration systems are generally organised, with medicines supplied in blister packs and stock levels corresponding with records sampled. Medication is not managed appropriately to ensure its efficacy or safety. Appropriate systems are not always implemented when receiving new medication supply. Controlled drugs are locked away in the correct storage facility however; there we found evidence of some medications not being received and stored in accordance with the service medication policy.

Environment

Good

The environment that people experience is good. People live in an environment that is clean, welcoming and generally well maintained. During the inspection, communal areas, bedrooms and facilities observed were clean, homely and personalised to reflect people's preferences. People can access a range of communal spaces including lounges, dining areas and a well-developed outdoor garden area which promotes wellbeing and opportunities for social engagement. The garden is particularly valued by people living at the service and includes accessible pathways, seating areas, flowers, wildlife projects and shaded areas for use during warmer weather.

The service has invested in improvements to the environment, including redecoration of communal areas and development of the garden space. Documentation reviewed demonstrates that people have been involved in decisions regarding aspects of the environment, including the design of the welcome sign and colour schemes used within the home. People and visitors spoke positively about the cleanliness, comfort and appearance of the service.

The environment is accessible, with a lift available to access upper floors and adaptations in place to support people with reduced mobility.

Notwithstanding these positives, we identified areas where environmental governance and health and safety oversight required strengthening. While fire safety checks are being completed, records demonstrate these are not consistently undertaken at the required frequency. We found gaps in weekly fire safety checks and limited evidence of actions arising from fire risk assessments being routinely monitored and progressed. Daily checks regarding fire routes are completed; however, there is insufficient evidence of broader weekly and monthly monitoring arrangements.
Whilst recent gas, electrical and fire risk assessment documentation is in place, it is not always clear whether all recommendations and action plans arising from these assessments has been completed. In addition, a lift inspection report referenced hazards associated with the loft hatch area and required further clarification regarding actions taken to mitigate identified risks. Overall, the service provides a comfortable, clean and pleasant environment which positively supports people. However, improvements are needed to strengthen environmental auditing, health and safety monitoring and the oversight of actions arising from maintenance and fire safety assessments to ensure risks are consistently identified and addressed.

Leadership & Management

Requires Significant Improvement

Leadership and management require significant improvement. The inspection identified significant and widespread concerns regarding leadership, management and governance arrangements at Beatrice Webb. Although the interim manager has recently taken positive steps to identify shortcomings and implement improvements inspection findings demonstrate longstanding weaknesses that have not been effectively identified, monitored or addressed through existing governance systems.

The Responsible Individual (RI) has not exercised effective oversight of the service in line with regulatory requirements. Significant weaknesses were identified across several key areas, including staff supervision, training compliance, personal planning, health and safety monitoring, and quality assurance processes. Taken together, these concerns indicate systemic governance failures and an inability to provide sufficient assurance regarding the quality and safety of care provided. Several issues had also been identified during previous inspections, demonstrating that improvements have not been sustained.

Governance and quality assurance arrangements are ineffective. Reports do not provide sufficient evidence of meaningful consultation with people using the service, relatives or staff. Reports lack detail regarding feedback obtained, themes identified and how findings inform service improvement. In addition, conclusions contained within some reports are not consistent with inspection findings, particularly in relation to training compliance and staff engagement.

Quality of Care reviews are similarly ineffective. Reports contained inaccuracies and conclusions that are not supported by available evidence. Improvement actions lack clear accountability, timescales and monitoring arrangements, reducing confidence in the reliability of information used to assess service quality. The most recent review had also not been completed within required timescales.

Recruitment records do not consistently demonstrate compliance with regulatory requirements. supervision arrangements have fallen considerably behind prior to the appointment of the interim manager. Training oversight is also ineffective, with gaps identified in mandatory and specialist training, including medication management, dementia care and food hygiene. Inaccurate training records further limit the RI ability to assure themselves that staff possess the necessary skills and competencies to meet people's increasingly complex needs safely.

There is also limited evidence that staffing levels are regularly assessed against people's changing needs. While recent interim management actions are positive, governance arrangements remain ineffective overall. A Priority Action Notice is issued under Regulation 66. Significant improvements are required to strengthen oversight, quality assurance and accountability systems and to ensure sustained regulatory compliance and safe, high-quality care for people using the service.

Areas identified for improvement

Where we identify Areas for Improvement but we have not found outcomes for people to be at immediate or significant risk, we discuss these with the provider. We expect the provider to take action and we will follow this up at the next inspection.

Where we find outcomes for people require significant improvement and/or there is risk to people's well-being we identify areas for Priority Action. In these circumstances we issue a Priority Action Notice(s) to the Provider, and they must take immediate steps to make improvements. We will inspect again within six months to check improvements have been made and outcomes for people have improved.

The table(s) below show the area(s) for priority action and/or those for improvement we have identified.

Summary of Areas for Improvement	Date identified
INSP-00069438-LPRD fount there was a potential risk to people and their outcomes as we could not confirm safe recruitment and vetting processes are in place, nor could we confirm staff have completed an appropriate induction, has completed appropriate training or consider the quality of supervision sessions.	05/12/24
Peoples outcomes are at risk of not being met as care staff are not being appropriately supported within their roles	05/12/24

Summary of areas for Priority Action	Date identified
The findings of this PAN identify systemic failures in governance, oversight and quality assurance, resulting in insufficient assurance that risks are being effectively identified, monitored and mitigated. Consequently, people living at the service remain at increased risk of receiving unsafe, inconsistent care that may not meet their assessed needs.	17/08/26
