Summary:

Hafan Deg is a residential care home on the outskirts of Lampeter. Well-being is rated as good because people receive a service that is highly person centred, that enables them to achieve their health and well-being outcomes. People have developed extremely positive relationships with the familiar and caring staff.

Care and support is rated as good because people receive care and support from a team of passionate and friendly care workers. Care workers are guided by accurate and individualised personal plans that enable them to successfully meet people's needs.

The environment is rated as good because people are very comfortable and relaxed throughout the home. Improvements have been made to the home and the provider intends to continue these to enhance people's well-being.

Leadership and management is rated as good because the provider has good oversight of the service. Strong leadership ensures people receive high-quality care from a team of dedicated and skilled care workers who receive effective support from their managers.

Findings:

Well-being — Good

People are treated with dignity and respect by the whole staff team. They are supported to identify their health and well-being outcomes, while also being encouraged to use and build on existing strengths. A visiting representative told us, “Overall it’s a good home and the staff are great and make this place so good”.

People have as much control over their day-to-day lives as possible. They are actively supported to be involved in decisions that affect them, ensuring that their voices are heard. This approach helps people to take charge of their lives with confidence and assurance.

There is a strong sense of community within the home. Positive relationships between people living at the service are evident and contribute to a family atmosphere. We observed people engaging naturally with one another, sharing conversations and offering support. This demonstrated people are comfortable in each other's company and promote one another's well-being, creating a genuine sense of belonging.

People enjoy taking part in a wide variety of planned activities and there is unrestricted visiting for family and friends. People are supported to maintain and sustain existing relationships with family, friends and important people in their lives as far as possible. This is facilitated by staff who respect these relationships and understand the importance they hold in people’s lives.

Welsh language and culture is embedded in the service, people converse with each other and the staff team in English or Welsh as they choose. Signage around the building is both accessible and bilingual to assist people further with their communication needs.

People are safeguarded from abuse and neglect. People are provided with a secure environment where they feel safe. The service encourages feedback from people and their representatives to ensure every voice is heard. There are effective support systems to ensure any risks are promptly identified and addressed.

People live in accommodation that supports them to achieve positive outcomes. The new design, layout and decoration of the setting and quality of the furnishings and fixtures meets people’s needs.

Care & Support — Good

People are very happy with the care and support they receive from the team of understanding and familiar care workers. We observed many warm, fun and friendly interactions throughout the inspection. A person who lives at the service told us, "The staff here are first class".

People experience very good quality care because there is a detailed process before the manager agrees to provide the service. The effective assessments check if the provider can fulfil their needs and personal outcomes alongside people already receiving the service.

People are involved in their personal plans. Their care and support is co-produced between them, their representatives, relevant professionals and care staff. Personal plans are strengths based, highly individualised and outline how staff should support people to achieve their well-being outcomes. People's plans include their preferences, routines and beliefs. A care worker told us, "It's nice to be able to make a real difference to someone's life".

People's well-being and safety is prioritised by the service through identifying and managing potential risks. People's right to make their own choices and take informed personal risks is promoted by the positive culture in the service. This is clearly reflected in people's individual plans.

The service works creatively to ensure people are offered choices in enjoyable and stimulating activities. People engage in meaningful pastimes, such as gardening, cooking, exercise classes, shopping, visiting entertainers and access their local community. Photographs of people taking part in these activities are recorded in appealing activity books and shared with family and friends.

People experience care and support that is dignified and respectful. People have positive interactions with staff, friends, family, and each other. People are supported to attend and participate in activities related to health promotion, staff are aware of their role in this and the current needs of each individual. A support worker said, "It's nice to have a job where you can spend quality time with people".

People receive their medication as prescribed in accordance with national guidelines and the service provider's medication policy.

People are protected as much as possible from the risk of infection because premises and equipment are kept clean and hygienic. Food hygiene practices are good. There is an effective approach to managing and preventing the risk of infection, with clear roles and responsibilities.

Environment

Good

The building is homely and very well maintained. The provider has upgraded communal rooms, the majority of bedrooms, bathrooms and improved the overall décor, with further plans to replace the heating system. People's views and needs are considered when maintaining the building. Individual rooms are highly personalised; people can decorate them with items of their own furniture, ornaments and equipment.

People value the ability to access different communal and private spaces in which to spend time alone, socialise or entertain visitors. Communal spaces are bright and welcoming. They meet the needs of people, promoting independence and providing opportunities for private meetings, activities, and recreation.

Outdoor areas are safe, accessible and extremely welcoming, allowing people to spend time outside independently. We were told about people enjoying them to grow their own food, socialise, relax and exercise in the warmer weather.

Safety is a key consideration at the service, people can easily navigate the home and access necessary equipment. The service manages risks to people, staff are familiar with the strategies and apply them consistently.

Regular servicing, maintenance and immediate repairs to equipment ensure the safety and well-being of people using the service.

Security arrangements are in place to protect people without compromising their rights, privacy, and dignity. This includes protecting personal property and providing appropriate access to and from the premises.

Leadership & Management — Good

The provider oversees the quality of the service through their detailed and effective auditing processes. Information gathered from both internal and external sources guides quality review reports and improvement plans

The Responsible Individual (RI) is well known and visits the service regularly to talk with people, their representatives and staff. Feedback from everyone involved is actively encouraged by them to support assessing the quality of the service and to consider any improvements. People know how they can provide feedback about their experiences of the service.

The manager is well supported by a deputy and a team of senior care workers. They have worked together effectively to create a friendly and caring culture, that enables people to live as well as possible. Care workers are positive about the relationships they have with people, one told us, "I love working with the residents and every day is different". People, their representatives and care workers have confidence in the manager and deputy, they can openly discuss any concerns they have with them.

Care workers have regular one-on-one supervision sessions with their manager at least quarterly and an annual review to provide feedback and identify any training needs. Care workers told us the manager and deputy are accessible and extremely supportive. They told us, "The open-door policy here is brilliant, [manager] and [deputy] are always available and so supportive" and "The managers are easy to talk to, and they know I'm coming from the resident's point of view".

The service provider has strict selection and vetting processes for hiring staff to ensure they are qualified and trustworthy. Care workers undergo routine and regular checks to ensure they remain suitably fit to work in the service and are appropriately registered with professional bodies. The service has an effective induction that prepares new staff for the role. Care workers are positive about the opportunities they receive.

Care workers demonstrate a positive approach to protecting people and keeping them safe. Staff have good communication with their managers and are confident to report concerns if needed.

Areas identified for improvement

Where we identify Areas for Improvement but we have not found outcomes for people to be at immediate or significant risk, we discuss these with the provider. We expect the provider to take action and we will follow this up at the next inspection.

Where we find outcomes for people require significant improvement and/or there is risk to people's well-being we identify areas for Priority Action. In these circumstances we issue a Priority Action Notice(s) to the Provider, and they must take immediate steps to make improvements. We will inspect again within six months to check improvements have been made and outcomes for people have improved.

CIW has no areas for improvement identified following this inspection.

CIW has not issued any Priority action notices following this inspection.
