Summary:

Woodland Lodge Care Home provides residential care for adults age eighteen and over. It can accommodate a maximum of nineteen people, of any gender. The service is located near the harbour town of Tenby on the picturesque Pembrokeshire coastline.

People experience good well-being outcomes. They told us they feel safe and happy with the service. Care staff have developed positive relationships with people, relatives and visiting professionals.

Care and support are good. We saw care staff treat people with dignity and respect and encourage them to make choices about their care and support. Care staff know people well and understand what is important to them.

The environment is good. People live in a clean, comfortable and welcoming home. The provider continues to invest in the environment and people benefit from a range of communal and private spaces which reflect their individual preferences and interests.

Leadership and management are good. An experienced management team leads the service with oversight from a visible and accessible Responsible Individual (RI).

Findings:

Well-being — Good

People achieve positive well-being outcomes and maintain control over aspects of their daily lives. We observed warm and respectful interactions between people and care staff. One person told us, "Staff are fantastic." During mealtimes, people and care staff socialise with each other and enjoy spending time together. People told us, "Yes the staff are lovely" and "Great, very nice." We saw care staff treat people with dignity and respect and encourage them to make choices about their care and support, where it is appropriate.

People maintain important relationships with family and friends. The service encourages visitors, and relatives to visit freely. One relative told us, "If I'm around, I always pop in. I can visit anytime." Care staff build positive relationships with people and treat them with care, kindness and respect. One person told us, "It is great, they look after me." A relative told us*," I thought, this is it. [Relative] likes it here."*

People receive the support to maintain their physical, mental and emotional well-being through proactive care planning and risk management. This encourages people to do things they enjoy within safe parameters. The provider recruit care staff safely and complete appropriate pre-employment checks. New care staff complete an induction programme and work alongside experienced colleagues before providing care independently.

People are protected from abuse and neglect. Care staff understand safeguarding procedures and know how to respond to concerns. Care staff complete safeguarding training, and the provider has comprehensive safeguarding policies and procedures in place.

Risk assessments provide clear guidance and are regularly reviewed to reflect people's changing needs. Care staff access specialist advice and support when required. There is a good emphasis on the importance of hydration and having healthy varied diets. Individual diets are catered for and special events such as birthdays are celebrated.

We reviewed audits relating to fire safety, infection prevention and control and environmental safety. These were all completed to a satisfactory standard. These arrangements help maintain people's safety and well-being.

Overall, people receive person-centred care which supports their individual needs, preferences and outcomes. People exercise choice and control over their daily routines. They decide when to get up, retire to bed and how they spend their day. The home provides a variety of spaces where people can socialise or spend time alone if they prefer. Care staff work collaboratively with relatives and professionals to ensure people receive responsive and effective support. The service provider makes an effort to promote the use of the Welsh language and culture.

Care & Support — Good

People have personal plans which provide care staff with clear guidance about their care and support needs. We reviewed a sample and found they contain information about people's backgrounds, preferences and daily routines. Personal plans provide care staff with guidance on how to support people safely, whilst promoting choice, independence and dignity. Care staff review these regularly; however, we found records do not always evidence the involvement of people, their families or representatives in the review process.

People receive care in a dignified and respectful manner. People spoke positively about the care staff and the support they receive. Comments included, "I love all the staff, they know how to look after me", "They are really good and kind", and "I love living here, staff are so good and kind. My relatives are always made to feel very welcome."

Care staff know people well and understand what is important to them. We saw them provide reassurance and encouragement when needed, and people respond positively to their support. The professional and respectful culture at the service is led from a shared set of values which promote respect, teamwork and pride. A resident at the service told us, "Yes, they look after me well."

People are protected from harm and abuse. Relatives told us they feel informed and involved in decisions about their family members' care. The service has robust safeguarding arrangements, supported by training, policies and procedures. Care staff complete detailed risk assessments which help them manage risks effectively and consistently.

Medication management arrangements are effective. Care staff administer medicines safely and in accordance with current guidance and best practice. Trained care staff demonstrate confidence in managing medicines and complete accurate medication administration records. We found no gaps in the records reviewed and saw no evidence of recent medication errors. The service stores medicines securely in a designated medication room and monitors storage conditions appropriately. Policies and procedures support safe medication management and care staff receive regular medication training.

People are protected from the risk of infection. Care staff follow effective infection prevention and control procedures, use appropriate personal protective equipment (PPE) and have access to suitable supplies and training. We found the home clean, tidy and well maintained throughout.

Overall, care and support are good. Care staff know people well and people receive good care in a dignified manner.

Environment — Good

People live in an environment which is safe, comfortable and well maintained. People have access to spacious communal areas, private bedrooms and secure gardens where they can relax and socialise. The home benefits from an attractive outdoor space. Communal areas provide a pleasant and welcoming environment. Outdoor areas include a seating area providing opportunities for relaxation and meaningful outdoor activity. People personalise their bedrooms with photographs, ornaments and other personal belongings.

The home was clean throughout our visit, and the domestic team maintain high standards of cleanliness. The kitchen has achieved a Food Standards Agency rating of five. Catering staff have suitable equipment and maintain well-stocked food storage area.

The entrance to the home is appropriately secure to protect people from unknown visitors. On the day of inspection, we were asked to sign the visitors' book and our identification was checked. The service maintains appropriate security arrangements to protect people's safety.

During the inspection, we identified a potential trip hazard caused by a raised threshold between the lounge and outdoor area. The provider responded promptly with a written risk assessment and improvement plan and provided assurance the issue would be addressed. We found no evidence people have been adversely affected by this hazard.

Maintenance checks take place routinely in and around the premises to ensure people remain safe. The maintenance file details these checks which include fire safety checks and hot and cold-water checks. We saw appropriate oversight regarding gas and electricity safety checks and portable application testing (PAT) has taken place. Checks for manual handling equipment and lift servicing within the home are completed as required. People have individual personal emergency evacuation plans (PEEPs) to guide care staff on how to support people to leave safely in the case of an emergency.

The service promotes hygienic practices and manages the risk of infection. Care staff maintain high standards of hygiene and follow infection prevention and control procedures. These arrangements reduce the risk of cross-contamination.

We saw Personal Protective Equipment (PPE) and hand sanitising stations located around the home. Care staff told us of sufficient PPE stocks. The laundry room is well organised and all machines seen to be in good working order. All COSHH (Control of Substances Hazardous to Health) materials are stored correctly, in line with the regulations.

Overall, people benefit from a warm, clean and welcoming environment. The provider continues to invest in the service. During our inspection we saw flooring was being replaced and the main dining room was being redecorated. The improvements, including refurbishment and decoration projects, will continue to enhance people's quality of life.

Leadership & Management — Good

People benefit from effective leadership, governance and oversight. Managers maintain a visible presence within the home and work alongside care staff to support the delivery of care. Leaders promote a positive, inclusive and respectful culture which focuses on people's well-being outcomes.

The Responsible Individual (RI) is accessible and well known to people, staff, relatives and professionals. Governance systems provide effective oversight of the service and support continuous improvement. The manager is experienced and suitably qualified for the role. The manager is supported by a deputy manager. The management team are well known by the people who live at the service and their representatives. The service is currently recruiting a catering manager.

People receive support from care staff who have the knowledge, skills and qualifications required to meet their needs. One person told us, "Staff are fantastic." Care staff access a range of training opportunities, regular supervision and annual appraisals. Managers provide regular supervision and support to care staff, enabling them to reflect on practice and develop professionally.

The provider follows robust recruitment and vetting processes evidenced in a sample of staff personnel files. Care staff files are well organised and contained the required information, including evidence of appropriate checks and professional registrations where applicable. This includes references and a current Disclosure and Barring Service (DBS) check to ensure they are fit to work.

We saw a range of routine audits to monitor the service. We saw staff follow company policies and procedures. They support staff to deliver outcomes for people. The Statement of Purpose (SoP) is clear, value based and reflects the service being provided.

Overall, leadership and management arrangements are good. The service provider's oversight and governance foster a positive and compassionate culture.

Areas identified for improvement

Where we identify Areas for Improvement but we have not found outcomes for people to be at immediate or significant risk, we discuss these with the provider. We expect the provider to take action and we will follow this up at the next inspection.

Where we find outcomes for people require significant improvement and/or there is risk to people's well-being we identify areas for Priority Action. In these circumstances we issue a Priority Action Notice(s) to the Provider, and they must take immediate steps to make improvements. We will inspect again within six months to check improvements have been made and outcomes for people have improved.

CIW has no areas for improvement identified following this inspection.

CIW has not issued any Priority action notices following this inspection.
