Findings:

Well-being — Excellent

People have strong control over their lives. Tailored information empowers them to communicate, make choices and participate fully in daily life. People's communication needs are assessed and person-centred communication tools and aids are used and there is access to a speech and language therapist. Social stories help people with transitions, changes in routines, expectations and new experiences. The service actively promotes the Active Offer of Welsh with bilingual information, documentation and signage available where appropriate. The manager told us, "Communication is viewed as everyone's responsibility and sits at the heart of our care and support model".

People live healthier lives with significant improvements in their physical, mental and emotional wellbeing. The manager shared examples of work around desensitisation and social stories to assist and prepare people for upcoming health appointments. Consultations and visits take place with doctors and opticians carry out home visits. The use of 'My dental passport' promotes good oral health with access to dentists where required. Monthly reviews show examples of healthier diets, reductions in weight, increased mobility and positive behaviours and discussions around any health concerns. People build on their strengths and develop their skills and independence. Staff said, "Residents well-being, dignity and individual needs are always prioritised, staff go above and beyond to ensure they receive the best care possible". Relatives told us*, "My son has settled in well and always seems happy"* and "The management and staff are always friendly and happy to help".

People benefit from positive and trusting relationships. They maintain existing friendships, families come to visit, people enjoy overnight stays with them and regular contact is maintained. Staff said, "We go above and beyond to meet individual needs, and it really feels like a caring family environment". Professionals told us, "During my time visiting I noticed that staff were attentive, friendly and really cared for the residents at Beechley Road".

People are consistently achieving outcomes and these are celebrated. A 'wall of fame' shows photographs of people's achievements. They enjoy venturing out to new places, using public transport, and we saw scrap books capturing adventures. Staff also try new activities for the first time alongside people, sharing in their enjoyment and accomplishments. Professional's commented "My experience of working with the staff team has been positive. They are professional, thoughtful, and focused on achieving positive outcomes for the individuals they support, particularly those with complex needs".

Care & Support — Excellent

Highly detailed and extensive person-centred plans ensure people's complex and specific needs are consistently met. Transition planning is comprehensive, using specific assessment tools to gather important information with input from family members and professionals. Monthly resident's updates are also shared with families and professionals. Person-centred reviews are interactive, involve and include people where possible with their families, independent advocates and others involved in their care and support. Staff said, "The fact that the management involve support staff in reviews, meetings and future plans for the residents work really well as they notice that as support staff, their opinion is highly valued". Relatives commented "The communication from the staff is amazing, I get updated regularly on what my relative has been up to and get monthly reports. They also inform me of how he has got on at appointments".

People receive high-quality care and support from a service tailored around their every need. Plans and other documentation are strengths based and clearly record how staff can best support them. The manager shared examples of highly positive outcomes for people following reductions in medication resulting in enhanced quality of life. Another example given was when staff spent time with a person during their stay in hospital to help them feel settled and safe. The manager and staff are supported by a clinical skills team and multidisciplinary meetings are held in people's best interests. Professionals commented "Their approach is person-centred, and they work collaboratively with multidisciplinary professionals, ensuring that best interest decisions are followed appropriately and in line with agreed procedures". Staff told us, "The management and staff are consistently pushing for high care standards". Relatives said "Beechley has made such a positive difference to my son's life, he is able to access the community safely every day". They also commented "The staff and management always go that extra mile to ensure my son is looked after and cared for well".

Robust systems protect people from harm. Staff receive specific training to respond in a positive and proactive manner using a consistent approach. The manager is passionate about positive behaviour support and is very proud of the plans in place. Staff said, "The use of Positive Behaviour Support (PBS) helps staff understand behaviours and respond appropriately rather than simply reacting to them". The manager delivers workshops to help family members understand and use the same strategies at home. This gives them a greater understanding and confidence and promotes a highly consistent approach to supporting their relative.

The service promotes good hygiene and effectively manages infection risks through clear policies, regular audits and staff training. Infection prevention and control champions support good practice, while the manager regularly attends forums to maintain their own knowledge and understanding. Staff have access to personal protective equipment (PPE). A staff member involved in audits identified a need to raise staff awareness of the infection control grab bag and delivered a presentation at a team meeting.

Environment — Good

People live in accommodation which meets their individual needs. There are separate apartments and each has a lounge, bedroom and en-suite. Apartments are personalised to varying degrees in line with peoples' preferences and reflect any specialist interests and items of importance. Shared communal areas are available for activities and socialising including lounges, kitchen and laundry. There is a small quieter lounge for families and visitors to use. The dining room has a smaller kitchen area created within it. The manager told us people chose the dining room layout themselves. The laundry room has pictorial strips and visuals to assist people to be more independent in tending to their own clothing. An activity room is filled with lots of different items which interest people. Emphasis is placed on creating a low arousal environment to promote calm with the use of visual information to aid orientation. Adjustments are made to accommodate peoples changing needs, for example reduced mobility.

The manager acknowledges there is a small, enclosed garden space. They told us about initial assessments which consider if this is the right environment for each person. The manager makes flexible use of the limited garden space, adapting it to people's preferences. For example, a trampoline and basketball hoop has been added to support people's chosen activities. A person is taking an active role in personalising and maintaining their own part of a small courtyard area by choosing and buying items to enhance the space. The manager ensures people have access to alternative outdoor space. This includes the wider community, local amenities, parks, leisure facilities, countryside walks, social opportunities and activities in line with people's personal preferences and goals.

The environment is kept safe, secure and well maintained with continuous monitoring and maintenance work. The RI visits to the service include looking at the premises and addressing any emerging issues. Plans are in place to monitor work completed and due to be done. There is careful consideration and consultation around any planned works to ensure people experience the least disruption possible. Health and safety and fire audits and checks are carried out to identify and improve any areas. Personal emergency evacuation plans are in place to support people to leave their home safely. They record any extra support required as well as items to offer to provide comfort and shelter to people. Grab bags to use in emergency situations contain visual images of safe locations to support people's communication needs as well as umbrellas and foil blankets. A piece of work is being completed to support people who have difficulties with the sound of the fire alarm going off. Staff are issued with an employee safety handbook. Staff commented "The service has done very well in providing a Conducive Environment for both residents and members of staff".

Leadership & Management — Excellent

People benefit from a highly motivated and dedicated staff team who work well together. The manager told us a values-based recruitment and selection process is used. Recruitment checks include disclosure and barring service (DBS) checks and staff are registered with Social Care Wales (the workforce regulator).

Staff feel very well supported, valued and respected. Changes have been made to the way supervisions are carried out to encourage staff to talk more. Team meetings take place away from the home and are highly creative. These include fun, practical activities with competitions, challenges, prizes and presentations by staff. Staff commented "The company is really doing well for staff. Listening to our concerns and letting our voices be heard". Staff wellbeing is supported with access to an employee assistance programme, with incentives and other benefits available to them. There is a monthly recognition scheme for staff going above and beyond in their role or demonstrating excellent practice and they are rewarded with a voucher of their choice.

Staff have opportunities for learning, development and promotion. They complete training relevant to their roles and responsibilities and the people they support. Staff said, "The constant training given to staff members plays a major role in making sure staff know how to take good care of the residents". Staff commented "There is career progression and there is no discrimination". Additional support is provided to team leaders. Staff said, "The people who lead on every shift are all exceptional leaders". Professionals commented "I was very impressed; the staff were outstanding".

Governance arrangements ensure a high-quality service is provided for all. The RI is very complimentary about the manager and is proud of the service. The manager feels very much supported, listened to and heard and has been sponsored to complete a degree to further their studies. Staff told us the manager is "exceptional", "The management team at 59 Beechley Road is nothing short of excellent" and "The way the home is run is excellent". Extensive and robust systems include monthly quality assurance and improvement reports, RI three-monthly visits and six-monthly quality of care reviews. The manager provided examples of shared practice and lessons learnt to further improve the service.

A positive and compassionate culture is strongly promoted. The organisations values are clear and revisited with the staff team. Staff said, "There is a positive and supportive culture throughout the service, making it a lovely place to work". Staff also commented on an "amazing experience" and an "exceptional service". Staff told us "The management team are fantastic, approachable and always willing to listen and provide support. The directors are equally committed and accessible with a willingness to help whenever needed".
